

Frequently Asked Questions (Doctoral Colloquium)

What is the Doctoral Colloquium?

The ANZMAC Doctoral Colloquium offers a platform to assist PhD students in developing and shaping their current research practice towards successful academic careers.

Designed to connect students to peers and academic mentors, the Doctoral Colloquium at ANZMAC 2021, will offer a collegial environment for the exchange of cutting-edge research ideas and supportive feedback. Participants from all around the world will share resources, build connections, and find inspiration to continue developing their research for greater impact.

When is the Doctoral Colloquium?

The Doctoral Colloquium will run from Friday 26th November – Sunday 28th November.

The program shows Australian Eastern Daylight Time.

What are the key dates for submissions?

Submissions Open: Monday 24 May 2021

Submission Close (Extended Abstract): Monday 26 July 2021

Author Notification: Thursday 26 August 2021

Full papers due: Sunday 24 October 2021

How to I apply for submission?

The submission link will be available from Monday 24th May 2021.

Students need to provide a 750-1000 word (excluding references) extended abstract about their chosen topic. Early stage students should focus on the research question they would like to address, the significance of the problem, and their proposed methodology.

Early stage students are typically those who are yet to complete their confirmation or related milestone.

Later stage students should present (preliminary) findings and articulate contributions to theory and practice.

When will I be told if my submission is accepted?

Students will be informed of their acceptance into the Doctoral Colloquium based on the submitted extended abstract by Thursday 26 August.

Accepted students are then required to submit a more in-depth document. The purpose of this document is to provide mentors with a reasonable overview of submitted work, and to highlight two or three aspects of their research on which mentors can provide feedback. The expected word range is 3000-5000 words including references. The assigned mentors will provide feedback on the work at the Doctoral Colloquium presentation.
